This advanced manual introduces the Denver Early Care Model (ESDM), the first fully-fledged, empirically-proven intervention model specifically designed for small children with autism. Supported by the principles of developmental psychology and applied behavioral analysis, the intensive educational interventions of the ESDM are implemented within play-based routines aimed at fostering interpersonal relationships. This handbook provides structured practical strategies for working with very young children in individual and group settings, to foster development in key areas such as imitation, communication, social motivation and social, cognitive and motor skills, behavioral behavioral skills, adaptive and play.
